The London Times, in an editorial, admits that the amexation of Savoy must be quietly allowed, but at the same time denounces the act as one of spoilation and wrong, and in principle as bad as a march on the Rhine, or a sudden attempt on Antwerp. It adds, that it must leave upon all minds the conviction that there is no safety except in careful watchfulness and armed preparation against the attempt of a sovereign who thus seizes upon the possessions of a friendly power.

The New York Times remarks in a recent issue:

Such has been the uniform growth of the United States for seventy years past, that the aggregate result of the census of 1860, in regard to population, is no anystery. We know almost exactly what the aggregate is to be; and for a majority of the States we know almost the precise results. In the general and particular estimates, there are, however, two cariables. These are, first, the amount of foreign immigration and its distribution; and, secondly, the amount and distribution of domestic migrations. But, to correct these, we have some very accurate data. We have, for example, the whole amount of limmigration from Europe in the last ten years next, we have the average rate of mortality, showing how many of these are now alice; and, although we do not know the precise amount of domestic migration, we know certain general facts: that the great current of migration is to the West, and chiefly to the Northwest. In addition to all these general data, some of the States took semi-decennial consuses in 1855. The States of Massachusetts, New York, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin, took the census in 1855, and Arkansas in 1854.

In these Statea, situated in different parts of the Union, an almost exact estimate can be made, and they indicate very clearly the degree of growth in their respective sections. In some of the States also, the number of slaves is given for taxation. A calculation based on these facts for each particular State, gives an aggregate a little larger than what the general ratio of growth would give. Is that likely to be true? We think, it is, for this reason. Between 1850 and 1860 there arrived in the United States one million of foreign immigrants move than had arrived between 1840 and 1850. Deducting from foreign immigrants more than had arrived between 1840 and 1850. Deducting from these the proper ratio of deaths, and there would remain of these at least seren hundred thousand in 1860. This is to be added to the aggregate obtained by applying the ratio of antecedent growth. Taking these facts and principles as the basis of calculation, we have the following result for each State of the Union:

Present Political Aspect of Naples. A letter to the Providence (R. I.) Journal, to the political aspect of the country:

was recently upset on a windy day in a skiff in the Mississippi, and swam about two miles to the Arkanass shore, occupying nearly three hours in so doing.

A Bit of Candor Retween Paliticians—The Meanington correspondent of the New York Times relates this story:

A few they since several Virginia politicians called at the White House to pay their respects to the President, and in the course of the conversation Mr. B. related the following with great gies:

"When View President Brecklaridge visited Kentucky last December, for the purpose of mislang its speech before the Legislature, he mot General Lesfie Combs, the old Clay leader of the Whig, party of that State, and addressed lim as follows: "General Combs, you have performed longer service and more But such is not the condition of feeling with the head of the State toward the army. As the king passes the military stations, and the soldiers give the salute, by roll of drams and flourish of trumpets, the king's hat is suddenish pulled off and carried very humbly in the hand until he has driven quite out of sight. In contrast with this, the haughty air of unbeuding pride toward the people is marked. The king knows that the army is his only hope. If that fails him, his fate is fixed; and like the Pope and Dukes, he must fee from the wrath of the people which he and his Bourbon race have so long oppressed. Regiments of German and Swiss continue to be formed. Their hard, stupid faces, one can castly distinguish in the mass of olive-skinned, dark-eyed Italian soldiers. Naples swarms with troops. Their constant marchings and counter-marchings give additional liveliness to the streets of a city, which, with a population of more than half a million, is sufficiently bustling and moisy. The troops are for the most part strong men, well fed, well disciplined, and well conditioned; but it is a melauchely sight to see so much physical energy thrown away or made the instrument of despotism. There can be no hope for popular liberty in a country in which law can not be enforced and order maintained without the aid of a great standing army.

As Unsorhisticated Orginial.—The new appaintee to a place as Engineer, in the Capitol at Washington, D. C., is not very wise about engines. The day after his appointment, a gentleman and two ladies had the curiosity to look at the engine-room and its machinery, where they found the new office-holder on duty merely as gentleman usher, practical Engineers doing the real duty of the so-called "assistant engineer." "How many horse-power is your engine?" "Horse-power?" replies greeny, with a look of mingled pity and contempt, "don't you know the machine your by steam?"

A Despot-Lauding Volume.—The only book which has lately appeared in Naples is a panegyric on the life and death of the late despot Bomba, by a peault priest. Of this royal wretch who died in abject terror of soul, and inspeakable rottenness of hody, the panegyrist says: "He died a death to which the philosopher would in vain aspire, unless he were at the same time a saint.

The Present Population of the United States Census of 1860.

The New York Times remarks in a recent The Philadelphia North American relates The Mt. Holly (N. J.) Mirror of late date

Mr. Smith, though one of the best salesmen now extant, and a capital drummer, is a gentleman of clerical appearance, and when traveling on the Missussippi, this appearance procures for him great respect, and a cessation of "poker" playing upon the decks of the procures for him great respect, and a cessation of "poker" playing upon the decks of the steamers whenever he makes his approach.

Some time ago Mr. Smith was stopping in a town in the interior of Ohio. His principal business was with a gentleman whom we shall call Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown not being at his store, Mr. Smith called at the residence of his friend. Mr. Smith is a gentleman of great personal neatness. Mr. Smith accordingly took the last wrinkle out of a pair of tea-colored kids, raised his dickey just one and three-eighth inches, and dusted his boots with a handkerchief. He then administered the proper jerk to a silver-plated bell-pull, a the proper jerk to a silver-plated bell-pull, a process which brought to the door Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Brown's three oldest children, and Mrs. Brown's educated poodle.

"Come in, Mr. Smith—we're so glad to see you," was the simultaneous salutation of all

As Mr. Smith was an entire stranger to the family, Mr. Smith was slightly astonished at the warmth of his reception, and attributed it to the natural hospitality of the district, and made up his mind that the people of Ohio were among the most affable of any people in the world. Before Mr. Smith had time to think further, Mr. Smith's hat and peope in the world. Before Mr. Smith had time to think further, Mr. Smith's hat and overcoat had been consigned to a hat-rack, and a spruce looking darkey, in a white jacket, was executing a quickstep on his swallow-tail with a levy whisk.

Mr. Smith was now ushered into a family sitting-room, with oak furniture covered in green morocco, the ladies overwhelming him with questions concerning the health of his family, and with such volubility as to prevent him from putting in a syllable of reply. Before Mr. Smith had found an opportunity to say a word as to his business, Mrs. Brown's sister left the room and returned with a twelve pound buby in her arms. The baby was very red in, the parts visible. The parts invisible were enveloped in a wealth of white jaconet, with needle-work trimming. Mrs. Brown's sister was followed by a female African in a plaid turban, who carried a chima basin filled with cold water.

"We're all ready, brother Smith," said Mrs. Brown—Mrs. Brown's sister at the same time placing the youngest scion of the Brown family in the arms of Mr. Smith.

Brown—Mrs. Brown's sister at the same time placing the youngest scion of the Brown family in the arms of Mr. Smith. "Ready; for what?" asked Mr. Smith, as he looked first at the baby and then at the basin, his eyes standing out with astonishment, like the eyes of a badly scared lobster. "For you to christen our little Ferdinand; he's named after you," said Mrs. Brown, with her sweetest smile.

"Christen him, madam!" exclaimed our

"Christen him, madam!" exclaimed our commercial traveler, aghast with wonder.

"Certainly: Mr. Brown went for you this morning, and I'm so glad you came. Why didn't Mr. Brown come in with you?"

"Certainly: Mr. Brown in with you?"

"Certainly: sir," added Mrs. Brown's sister, "and you may as well begin at once. Mr. Brown has probably been detained by business, and will not return till late."

Mr. Smith could never say no to a lady. He now thinks that in all probability he would have gone ahead and christened baby, but for one 'circumstance. At that moment Mr. Brown cntered. Mr. Brown had just returned in company with Rev. Ferdinand Smith, of Trumbull County.

Grand tableau. Mr. Brown looked at Mr. Smith, of Philadelphia, looked at Mr. Smith, of Trumbull County, fooked at the baby, while the baby looked at all hands and set up a squall. Mr. Brown looked a second time at Mr. Smith, of Philadelphia, the baby, and "that best basin," and saw through matters at a glance. The next moment Mr. Brown was rolling on the floor in a paroxyism of laughter, while Mrs. Brown, supposing him to be in a fit, grew frantic, and undertook to restore him to animation by fanning him with the coal scuttle. Mr. Brown recovered at the expense of all the buttons upon his jacket, and then explained matters to Mrs. Brown, who hada't yet discovered her mistake. Mr. Brownsext introduced the parties to each other, wouldn't hear of our commercial friend taking leave. duced the parties to each other, wouldn't hear of our commercial friend taking leave, and finished up a pleasing evoning by chris-teding the baby according to canon. Mr. Smith, of Philadelphia, terminated his business in a satisfactory manner, and left on the next day. He still shudders, however, when he remembers how narrowly he ea-caped being pressed into ministerial func-tions. In order to prevent its repetition, he now sports a moustache.

Poetical Apotheosis of Napolcon. The Baltimore Evening Patriot says in a recent issue: The most unmitigated desceration of gen-tine poetic talent, that we have ever met with, has recently been exhibited by the pen of this once most eminent of living poetesses. She is a Napoleonist, it seems, that is, she believes that the French despot, who has crushed out the liberty of France, is the child or used out the inerty of France, is the child of God, in a good sense, and was raised up by Divine Providence to bless the French people in particular and Europe in general, as the enemy of freedom; and maddened by this phrenzied idea, she has been inditing some magnificent poems, so far as the versification and imagery go, but atterly execrable, when taken in connection with the investment of the connection of the fication and imagery go, but atterly execra-ble, when taken in connection with the impi-ous thought that Napoleon is a man after the heart of our Good God, and, therefore, is to be paid Divine Honors, which she freely accords to him!

There has been nothing like this abasing sycophancy since the days of Juvenal and Perseas, when men hastened to make brutes of themselves before those devils in human of themselves before those devils in human shape—the Roman Caesars—and actually worshipped them as Gods. How any woman like Mrs. Browning could, for a moment, be defrunded and dazzled out of her sound judgment by the iniquities of the Man of the Tuileries, is utterly inexplicable. That God will overrule his tyranny for the common good, no one doubts, but this does not make him a saint.

Mrs. Browning's health, they say, has failed. We want no more evidence of this fact, and of its disastrous influence upon her mind, than is afforded by her poems apotheosizing Napoleon the Bad

THE COTTON PRODUCT OF THE WORLD .- The THE COTTON PRODUCT OF THE WORLD.—The value of the cotion manufacturing industry of the world is estimated at $500,000,000, Taking the population of the world at $50,000,000, every man, woman and child annually uses cotton goods to the value of seventy cents. Of the raw cottom produced, the United States supplies more than three-fourths. The value of raw cotton exported from the United States, in 1859, was about $100,000,000.

THE VENOR OF "THEY SAY."—"They" will say anything and everything. "They" have said everything mean and despicable. "They" say things that break up families, crush hearts, blight hopes and smother worthy aspirations. Whenever a man circulates a slander, and give "They" as his authority, turn your back upon him. He means no good.

Corrector or Tapus and Esson.—Now and then, it is true, says Jeremy Bentham, one error may be driven out for a time, by an opposite error, one piece of nonsense by another piece of nonsense but for barring the door effectually and foreber against all error and all monsense, there is nothing like the simple truth.

"A fire was raging in the pines in Burling-ton County, last week, to a fearful extent, and of course, doing grest damage. It started at Garontown, half-way between Red Lion and Friendship. The news is important and interesting.
The King of Sardinia formally accepted the annexation of Tuncany, and had signed a decree to that effect.

The French army was daily quitting Lombardy, and would occupy Savoy. The Constitutional says this is not on account of any coldness toward Sardinia, but because the independence of Italy is irrevocably assured. The French dispatch, explaining the necessity for the annexation of Savoy.

The French dispatch, explaining the necessity for the annexation of Savoy, had been published. It contained nothing new.

The fire originated by some men, at Garontown, burning over a few acres of meadow, for the benefit of the apring pesture. It being excessively dry, and the wind high, as soon as the fire was kindled the flames spread in all directions, and it was impossible to check or control them.

The fire, at the last accounts, was doing considerable damage, and it is not believed can be fully extinguished while the present dry, windy weather continues.

The Mannahawkin stage, on its way to Mount Holly, on Friday, met with a narrow escape from the fire. The driver, before he was aware of it, found himself almost in the midst of the flames. The great body of the fire, however, seemed to be in advance of him, and he turned around to make good his escape, but he had not proceeded far before the flames checked him in his retreat, and he was obliged to pursue his journey in another direction.

In a short time he again found himself sur-direction.

In a short time he again found himself surrounded by the flames. He saw no other course to pursue but to go straight ahead, and urging his horses to their utmost speed, hoped soon to be free from the devouring element. But when he was surrounded by the greatest body of fire and smoke, his horses became frightened and stopped, and it was impossible to move them. Here they remained for a minute or two, the fire roaring and crackling to a terrific extent, when sudand crackling to a terrific extent, when suddenly, the smoke clearing away, the horses started, and the driver found that the great mass of fire had crossed the road a short distance in advance, and was making the most fearful ravages in its track to the right of him. He was soon enabled to get entirely out of its path, and felt that he had never before been in so terrible a position. At one time it appeared to him that the flames must entirely surround him and ent off all means of escape. He had two female passengers, and as may be supposed, they were frightened beyond all description. Fearing that they would perish in the fire and smoke, their screams were frequently of the most painful nature. and crackling to a terrific extent, when sud

Curious Instance of Alleged Seduction and Abduction in Tennessee.

The Nashville Banner of late date observes: A somewhat mysterious account of a seduction came to our notice yesterday in the following manner. A young and rather pretty woman who would give no other name than that of "Mollie," applied to one of the Deputy City Marshals yesterday, and implored his sid in the recovery of her child, which she said had been taken from her. Upon acrossexamination by the officer, the following history of the transaction was brought to light: It was the old story. Like many other unfortunates, she had loved—not wisely, it seems, but too well. She had listened once too often to the syren notes of the deceiver—had lingered too long near the witchery of the serpents music and had fallen an easy yietim into the coils. She had lived in Williamson, she said, and so had her betrayer. He persuaded her to come to Nashville, and she complied, (and, by the way, this is one of the causes why the list of abandoned females is so alarmingly on the increase in our moral city). She came to Nashville on Mednesday night, and shortly afterward became a mother.

Her betrayer, the father of her child, came

Her betrayer, the father of her child, came to her and obtained her consent to have the child removed. She was living then at a house on Spruce-street, formerly occupied by Amelia Perry. After twenty-four hours.

He maisoned had not appeared to also the had it, can not be stated. The melaneboly yet stern fact stands: An Ohio jury have settled that $600 represents the market value of a wife's affection. by Amelia Perry. After twenty-lour hours' separation from her offspring, she experienced a longing to have him back again, and prevalled upon the officer to assist her in recovering it. The officer went, according to directions, to a shoemaker's in South Nash-ville, where he procured the child and restored it to its mother. The parties who had the child in possession stating that it had been brought there to be taken care of. Altogether, it is rather a singular case. It not often happens that the father manifests such an attachment for 'pledges of affection' under such circumstances. That relation of friendship is more frequently 'on the mother's side."

The Arawonda, or Tolling Bell Bird.—Among the highest woods and deepest glens of Brazil a sound is sometimes heard, so singular that the noise seems quite unnatural; it is like the distant and solemn tolling of a church bell struck at intervals. This extraordinary noise proceeds from the Arawonda. The bird sits at the top of the highest trees in the deepest forests, and though constantly heard in the most desert places, it is very rarely seen. It is impossible to conceive anything of a more solitary character than the profound silence of the woods, broken only by the metalic and almost supernatural sound of this invisible bird, coming from the air, and seeming to follow wherever you go. The Arawonda is white withs circle of red round its eyes, its size is about that of a small pigeon.

TROOPS FOR THE WEST.—The transfer of troops from New York and Newport, for the department of the West, is not intended for special service, but only to fill up deficiencies in Fourth and Ninth Infantry, and the Third Artillery, scattered about Washington Territory, Oregon and California. Two bundred and eighty men, divided into four companies, are called for, of whom about one hundred and fifty will be supplied from Fort Columbus, and the others from New York. They will leave New York on the 20th inst.

Tan Fraks or Vesuvius.—The Naples correspondent of the Providence (R. I.) Journal writes on the 16th ult. "The fires of Vesuvius glow with as intense an energy as ever, although the mountain is not at present in violent cruption. The new fissures at the base of the old come are filled with a molten mass which boils and rolls out in a manner to strike terror into those who approach near enough to fully take in the awful grandeur of the scene. At night the mountain appears to be gashed with fiery sears, and by day it is seen to be mantled with morrid black folds of lava, which stretch for miles down its sides. The adventurous travelers who now seek to make the ascent are mearly discouraged by the formidable obstructions which these masses of lava present. Notwithstanding this the mountain is every day covered with parties eager to reach the top.
